

Bruce M. Deveney, Life Science, 1973

Bruce Deveney, superintendent of the East Pennsboro Area School District, serves as a role model for today's HACC students. Bruce is the first graduate of East Pennsboro Area High School to head the district.

"I don't know a person who knows more, cares more, or acts to provide the best for East Pennsboro Area School District's teachers, staff, and students," said Kim Grundon who serves on the school board. "Every decision he makes is intended for the good of the students."

After graduating from HACC in 1973, Bruce continued his education at Elizabethtown College, earning a bachelor's degree in biology. He also received a master's degree in instructional technology from Johns Hopkins University, and principal certification from Penn State University. In 1976, he became a science teacher at East Pennsboro Area Middle School and over the next 20 years held several teaching and administrative positions in the school district before being named superintendent in 2009.

As an educator, Bruce's long list of accomplishments include South Central Pennsylvania Joint Council for School Improvement Teacher of the Year, ACES Outstanding Educator Award, district representative to the Capital Area Intermediate Unit's Instructional Media Service Advisory, and district Year 2000 coordinator. He developed the district's technology plan, designed and implemented the middle school's computer curriculum, chaired the technology implementation committee, facilitated the district's Business Advisory Council, and supervised the high school business department.
