

Global Education Fund for Excellence

In fall 2017, HACC, Central Pennsylvania's Community College, served more than 200 international students. Many of these students face obstacles to success, such as language barriers and cultural differences, and need additional support, including tutoring and mentoring.

The Global Education Fund for Excellence will help international students by supporting innovative ideas to make their adjustment easier, such as:

Providing student mentors for international students.

HACC students will be trained to guide and assist international students in their transition into U.S. higher education.

Offering an international student college success course.

This course is offered to all HACC students to ensure success. Offering a section geared toward international students would truly help their transition to college.

Hosting a Global Education Leaders Conference at HACC.

This conference would bring leaders in higher education together to share best practices when dealing with international students and global education.

Helping students experience the U.S. and build leadership skills.

Students will travel the U.S. during spring break to volunteer with community organizations dedicated to education, health, social justice and civic responsibility and learn servant leadership, teamwork and communications skills.

In a society that is becoming more dependent on global awareness, HACC is leading the charge by investing in its international students. "As an international student, HACC provides me with ease of integration while attaining my nursing degree. It caters to my demographic and has excellent staff who assisted me every step of the way from my initial application, to I-20 to student visa. The process was smooth, my adviser encouraged me and I felt like I would be okay at HACC, and I am!"
